

Creamer says liquor store system cuts state's profits

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Attorney General J. Shane Creamer told a Liquor Control Board (LCB) hearing Friday that Pennsylvania made less revenue off liquor sales than other states despite its state liquor store system.

The LCB hearing was on proposed price increase on 510 items scheduled for May 31.

The increases range from a penny to $1.62 per bottle.

Creamer said that although the state's gross liquor revenues were "nearly twice the amount of gross liquor revenues taken in by either New York or California," Pennsylvania made less money than either of them.

"California chalked up nearly $50 million more profit and New York netted $77 million more profit than Pennsylvania in 1970," he said.

"Operating expenses in the two larger states were both less than $8 million in that year while Pennsylvania had operating expenses of $315 million."

He said in Ohio the state store system had gross revenues of $70 million less than Pennsylvania's and wound up with profits of $18.5 million more.

Creamer said all three of those states have lower retail liquor costs per bottle.

The board said the reason for the rising prices is increasing production and transportation costs and the fact that imported liquor is now more expensive since the devaluation of the dollar.

Edwin Winner, LCB chairman said "if the 18 per cent emergency tax is marked down to 10 per cent we would have the lowest prices in the country."

Liquor in Pennsylvania carries a 18 per cent emergency tax first imposed as a 10 per cent tax in 1936 and raised to the current rate in 1968. It is in addition to the six per cent sales tax.

The LCB said the retail liquor cost is determined by combining the delivered cost with the various taxes.

Winner did not reply to Creamer's comments about operating costs.

Alan Weinstein, education director of the Philadelphia Model Cities consumer program, said his research in the Philadelphia area showed wines in the $2 price range selling for 20 cents less in New Jersey and some domestic scotches selling for $2 less.

Leonard Talarico, the independent Association of Liquor Store Managers, said the problem is that the "neighboring states are not as tax burdened."

He said that of the 10 most popular items sold in Pennsylvania the quantity is greater than in New Jersey or New York.

Bombers pound port; Reds pressure Saigon

(Related stories, page two)

SAIGON (UPI) — American B52s flew into North Vietnam for the first time since last Sunday's raids against Haiphong Friday to pound Communist supply facilities at the port of Thanh Hoa, 90 miles south of Hanoi.

Communist gunners also shelled the U.S. base at Bien Hoa, 15 miles north of Saigon, fired 1,000 artillery, rocket and mortar rounds in the provincial capital at An Loc, and applied heavy pressure on two towns north of Saigon.

In neighboring Cambodia, government reinforcements gathered at Neak Luong, 32 miles east of Phnom Penh, to try to recapture a 50-mile stretch of Highway 1 taken earlier by the Communists. The highway is the major land lifeline between Phnom Penh and Saigon.

Elements of a new North Vietnamese division overwhelmed another district town, Hiep Duc, at the western end of the Que Son Valley just below the rocket belt from which the Communists often shell the huge U.S. air base at Da Nang.

Hanoi denial refuted

PARIS (UPI) — The United States published military intelligence reports Friday disclaiming North Vietnam's contention it had no hand in the invasion March 30 of South Vietnam.

The U.S. delegation to the Paris peace talks said in the published report that all but two North Vietnamese training divisions have been sent to fight in neighboring Indochinese countries, backing Washington charges Hanoi had invaded South Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos.

The Americans have refused to engage in open polemics with the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong, who hold frequent news conferences to denounce U.S. bombing of the north and its joint boycott of the conference with South Vietnamese negotiators.

The U.S. delegation's statement came on the heels of a charge made by South Vietnamese negotiator Pham Dang Lam who told the French state radio Hanoi had sent 100,000 fighting troops into South Vietnam, or the equivalent of 12 divisions.

At embattled An Loc, capital of Binh Long province, 60 miles north of Saigon, heavy shelling decimated a South Vietnamese battalion and forced it to abandon positions two miles south of the town, military sources said. Half the city was reported destroyed in more than two weeks of fierce fighting there.

The U.S. command in Saigon said the huge B52 Stratofortresses, which carry 30 tons of bombs each, hit the port and transportation complex at Thanh Hoa, a main supply depot for North Vietnamese operations south of the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ) that separates North and South Vietnam.

At the same time, U.S. Air Force and Navy tactical fighter-bombers, which have hit Thanh Hoa in the past, raided "military targets in North Vietnam that are helping to support the Communist invasion across the DMZ and into South Vietnam," command spokesmen said.

Targets, it said, "included logistic, transportation and air defense facilities in areas where the enemy has been assembling and moving supplies and troops to support the invasion."

The number of planes involved and details of the day-long raids were not disclosed. Last Sunday, the huge, highly vulnerable B52s bombed fuel depots and port facilities in Haiphong, 55 miles east of Hanoi. It was the first time in the war the eight-engine warplanes had struck that far north and the first air attack on Hanoi-Haiphong since former President Lyndon B. Johnson's bombing halt in November, 1968.

In Washington, Pentagon spokesman Jerry W. Friedheim said the fighter-jets struck at "targets that ranged widely over North Vietnam" but none in Hanoi or Haiphong.

Soviets reject Viet bid

LONDON — The Soviet Union has rejected a new British bid to reconvene the Geneva Conference to try to solve the Vietnam situation, government sources said Friday. The British ambassador in Moscow, Sir John Killick, Thursday asked Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko to reconvene the Geneva Conference on Indochina. Government sources said Gromyko rejected the British bid as "not practicable."

Crowd forces lottery change

HARRISBURG — The Lottery Bureau has changed the location of the first "sudden millionaire" drawing because more than 200 potential millionaires are expected to show up for the event. The drawing, originally scheduled to be held at 1 p.m. next Thursday in a local hotel, has been switched to the Forum of State Education Building here to accommodate all the contestants.

Power shortage threatens

WASHINGTON — Some areas of the United States may fall short of electricity in emergencies this summer, but as a whole the nation's utilities are better able to meet peak demand than they were a year ago, the Federal Power Commission (FPC) said Friday. The worst problems, if a heat wave or generating failures should hit, could be in a highly populated area running down the East Coast, the report said.

Special SALT talk held

HELSINKI — Soviet chief negotiator Vladimir Semenov returned from Moscow Friday and met three hours later with his American counterpart in a secret special session of the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks. Semenov was in Moscow for six days, during which two plenary sessions of the SALT negotiations were called off. In a brief arrival statement, he said he returned to continue the talks and that he had been working all the time in Moscow.

Consumer bureau 'unworkable'

WASHINGTON — Industry representatives Friday criticized an unworkable and chaotic proposal to remake the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) into a stronger and independent Consumer Safety Agency. Their position was criticized in turn by Judy Jackson, an associate of Ralph Nader, who said industry's real fear was that the agency would substitute government control for FDA programs of "voluntary compliance."

All-Europe talks likely

LONDON — The Communist-sought all-European security conference, with American and Canadian participation, is likely to be held in the spring of 1973, at the earliest, sources said Friday. This has emerged from summit talks between West German Chancellor Willy Brandt and British Prime Minister Edward Heath which ended Friday.

Junkets spread dollars

WASHINGTON — Although it was a year in which the government tried to keep dollars in the United States, House members shelled out nearly $1 million of the taxpayers' money in 1971 "official trips" abroad. Figures published Friday in the Congressional Record indicated that the amount of cash alone laid out to pay for living expenses and commercial travel of congressmen and aides came to somewhere between $800,000 and $900,000.

Specter asks proof of Shapp coercion

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey was challenged Friday to prove his accusation that Gov. Milton J. Shapp's state-wide Democratic party machinery coerced money from state employees to finance Sen. Edmund S. Muskie's campaign in the Pennsylvania primary.

A letter was hand-delivered to Humphrey from Republican Arlen Specter, Philadelphia's district attorney, demanding "whatever evidence you have that anyone has engaged in making forced contributions in connection with the current campaign."

Specter, prominently mentioned as a possible GOP candidate governor in 1974, said if Humphrey provides the evidence "I will call in those accused and see who the top man is who ordered this."

"I would expect the law to be applied to any high official," Specter told a news conference in Philadelphia. "It doesn't make any difference that the governor is involved in the charges and a former vice-president of the United States is making them."

Humphrey had no immediate comment on Specter's challenge but a spokesman at his Philadelphia headquarters said "making is a difficult charge to prove."

The letter was delivered to Humphrey as he campaigned in the Lehigh Valley with mounting evidence that the former vice-president was on the verge of winning the first presidential primary of his long political career.

Humphrey was rated a strong favorite to win the preferential aspects of the April 25 primary. A three-way race for second was developing in the closing days of the campaign between Muskie, Sen. George S. McGovern, and Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace.

There were widespread reports that Muskie, despite the around-the-clock, around-the-state help of Shapp and his organization, was slipping.

In the separate contest for 137 delegates to the Democratic National Convention, Muskie was expected to do much better, possibly challenging Humphrey for a majority.

Despite his troubles, Muskie flew to Ohio, which has its delegate-rich primary May 2, to campaign there before returning to the western part of Pennsylvania. Neither McGovern nor Wallace were in the state.

Humphrey launched increasingly sharp attacks on Shapp and the party machinery in the middle of the week and capped them Thursday by charging that the organization coerced government workers to put their money into Muskie's coffers. He also charged that the machine was stripping defectors to Humphrey of patronage, firing others, and ordering them not to attend Humphrey rallies.

End 1st highland tour

Astronauts cleared for 3rd walk

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — Astronauts John W. Young and Charles M. Duke Jr. made man's first exploration of the mysterious lunar highlands Friday and concluded it "must be the oldest stuff around."

Then, after they had finished their 7-hour, 11-minute tour of the cratered Cayley Plains, ground control said the two were cleared to make the two other moon excursions originally planned, although the third one on Sunday will be cut from seven hours to five.

Flight controllers originally had planned to wait until after Saturday's second moon tour in the lunar rover before deciding whether the third could be fitted in. But Jack King, chief spokesman for the space center, said Friday evening that No. 3 is "go" if all goes well in the meantime.

It had been decided earlier that the astronauts would remain on the moon for three full days regardless of the decision on the third surface exploration.

It already had been decided that the astronauts would be brought back for splashdown in the Pacific Thursday, a day early, after the original timetable for America's fifth and next-to-last scheduled Apollo mission fell victim to a landing which came six hours late.

Their tense delay in lunar orbit behind them, Young and Duke emerged at mid-day Friday from their landing craft Orion and were awed by rugged highland terrain formed billions of years ago during the moon's most violent period in creation.

"There you are, mysterious and unknown Descartes and Cayley Plains ... Apollo 16 is gonna change your image," said Young, the 41-year-old mission commander and veteran of three previous space flights, as he stepped onto the boulder-strewn Descartes region plateau at 11:59 a.m.

Duke, a 36-year-old Air Force pilot and space rookie, joined him a minute later, making them the ninth and tenth Americans to trudge the dusty, lunar surface. On their first excursion, they picked up an estimated 39 pounds of rocks including one sample that weighed nearly 14 pounds.

While fellow astronaut Thomas K. "Ken" Mattingly II orbited alone above them in the command ship Casper, Young and Duke unfurled their battery-operated lunar rover and set up a $25 million nuclear-powered scientific station before they set out on a two-hour tour of nearby craters to the west.

Young tripped over a golden, ribbon-like wire, breaking it beyond repair and losing what the space agency said was the most important experiment of the scientific station. It would have measured the heat flow from the moon's interior to determine whether it matched the surprisingly high heat emanating from below the Apollo 15 landing site far to the northwest.

Duke stopped drilling a deep core for the heat-measuring instruments, saying "I'm wasting my time." Mission Control said he was right.

"God damn, I'm sorry," said a disappointed Young.

A jammed antenna on Orion's roof deprived earthbound viewers of a live television glimpse of the astronauts' first steps on the moon for the first time in five Apollo landings.

Brilliant television pictures began about an hour later, however, when the antenna on the lunar rover, also equipped with a camera on its front bumper, went into operation.

Agnew raps one-sided war view

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President Spiro T. Agnew said Friday that Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and three Democratic presidential candidates kept silent when North Vietnam began its invasion of South Vietnam, but slandered President Nixon when he took action to halt the aggression.

In a speech at the concluding session of the annual meeting of the American Society of Newspaper Editors (ASNE), Agnew said:

"Let me simply say that as an American I am appalled at the conduct of American leaders who keep their peace while a Communist invasion takes place and then rise up and slander an American President for taking the necessary military action ... to halt that aggression."

Referring by name to Kennedy and Sens. George S. McGovern, Hubert H. Humphrey and Edmund S. Muskie, Agnew said North Vietnam's invasion was "greeted with silence. The war crimes were silent as church mice."

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The cost of living rose in March at less than half of February's pace and grocery prices showed nearly no increase at all after skyrocketing the month before, the government reported Friday.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS) put the overall consumer price rise at 0.2 per cent — in contrast to 0.5 per cent the previous month — and said food prices in supermarkets inched up only 0.1 per cent, a far cry from the 1.6 per cent leap in February that was attributed mainly to soaring meat tabs.

Moreover, the BLS said the actual buying power of the average weekly paycheck for rank-and-file workers, after taxes, went up 0.6 per cent in March and stood at 3.7 per cent above a year earlier.

The White House immediately hailed the report as evidence to back up administration claims that Phase II of President Nixon's economic controls is winning the battle against inflation.

"We have consistently expressed our confidence that the President's economic policies are having the desired effect," said Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler. "We are pleased, but we are not relaxing."

The BLS said the March increase in the Consumer Price Index was due chiefly to higher property taxes and prices for clothing, eggs, beef, veal and restaurant meals. It said those hikes were offset somewhat by lower mortgage interest rates and declines in prices for vegetables and pork.

After making seasonal adjustments, the BLS said the overall index virtually stood still in March — for the first time since 1966 — and that meant it had climbed at an annual rate of 3.7 per cent during the four full months since Nixon's wage-price freeze ended. Top administration economists have talked of getting the yearly rate below 3 per cent.

Of all the items on the index, which is computed monthly, the BLS said 75 per cent remained unchanged in March while 10 per cent declined and 15 per cent increased.

Muskie 'mines' for votes

NEW EAGLE, Pa. (UPI) — Sen. Edmund Muskie made his first trip into an underground coal mine Friday to "get some of the feeling of the physical dangers that might be involved."

Muskie said the Nixon Administration had failed to enforce the provisions of the 1969 Mine Health and Safety Act.

He promised to make the mines "safer and healthier" if elected president. Accompanied by company officials, Muskie went 315 feet down into the Thomas Portal of Consolidation Coal Co.'s Mathias mine in this Washington County community. He ventured only 75 feet into the shaft, asking questions of company vice president Max Florjancic.

Muskie saw no working miners, who were about eight miles at the other end of the tunnel. He shook hands with three soot-covered miners who emerged from the shaft as the candidate's entourage was about to leave.

Asked what he learned in the mine, Muskie replied: "You get the sense of confinement somewhat. You get the sense of being way below the ground and some of the feeling of the dangers that might be involved. You feel the problem of breathing."

Muskie, who said he had never been in a coal mine before, complained that more than 35,000 miners and widows in Pennsylvania had been refused help by the Nixon administration under the federal law. He noted that a Senate committee came to the Mathias mine before it wrote the 1969 law.

"But a callous administration has frittered away the protection the Senate set up. The strict standards we wrote for mine safety in 1969 are being undercut by sloppy enforcement in Washington, D.C.," he said.

The Maine Democrat earlier stopped at a U.S. Steel Corp. plant gate at McKeesport and strolled down the main street of the town shaking hands as he went. A small group of schoolgirls skipped behind him, singing "Hurrah for Muskie."

Convention switch possible

Miami defers GOP bid

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)—The Miami Beach City Council put off making a bid to the Republican party to move its national convention from San Diego to this city Friday after being told the GOP had registered last-minute objections to a change in dates.

Mayor Chuck Hall, who earlier went along with Washington Republican sources in saying the chances were "99 per cent" that the switch in cities would be made, said after the council meeting he could no longer assess the chances because "I can't follow the quick, subtle movements of the Republican party."

"It's times like these that make me proud to be a Democrat," said Hall, obviously miffed at the sudden roadblock to bringing his city the Republican, as well as the Democratic National Convention, which opens here July 10. Hall said he didn't know whether the problem was really the change in dates; an attempt by the GOP to use the threat of moving to Miami Beach as "leverage" to get things worked out in San Diego, or possibly a bid from another city.

"I don't know if we're being used, but if we are I sorely object to it," said the white-haired mayor.

The council voted 4-3 at the end of a 45-minute emergency session, called by Hall, to make a formal bid to the GOP to bring its August convention here, to defer action on the bid. The city's Tourist Development Authority earlier had approved a $250,000 cash offer to the Republicans.

However, City Manager Clifford O'Key told the Council that the negotiations with the Republican National Committee had been based on the date of the GOP convention being moved ahead from Aug. 21 to Aug. 14 in order to avoid a conflict in use of the Miami Beach Convention Hall.

"They (the Republicans) are not prepared to say yes or no to me at this time," O'Key said. He then recommended deferring any council action.

S.S. agent 'chills' editor

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A newspaper editor said Friday he and his wife were taken from a White House reception line by a Secret Service agent and asked what they planned to say when they met President Nixon. The editor called it "a chilling experience."

A.N. Romm of the Middletown, N.Y., Times Herald-Record, an Ottawa group newspaper, and his wife, Ethel, were among almost a thousand editors invited to the executive mansion Thursday.

He said the agent, who identified himself as Robert Taylor, politely explained he heard that Mrs. Romm mentioned at another reception Wednesday she liked to discuss current issues with persons she met on such occasions.

"Mr. Taylor wanted to know her intentions and wanted her assurance that she wouldn't do that," Romm said.

The editor said his wife, a writer herself, always felt compelled to say something "relevant" when she met Presidents but "she always stifled that compulsion." He said "someone must have felt obliged to pass on that information to the Secret Service."

"Mrs. Romm answered Taylor's direct question directly," he said. "Namely, no, she wasn't going to raise any subject as she passed through the receiving line."

The incident was brought to light at a panel of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, currently meeting here, by Tom Teepe, associate editor of the Dayton, Ohio, Daily News. Teepe thought ASNE should consider action.

Romm said he became concerned whether that was really the agent's job.

I suggested we need no lessons in presidential receiving line behavior and asked if he (Taylor) was concerned about security."

The editor said the agent, still very polite, said, no, just about the President's time."

Senate unit approves tough welfare rules

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate Finance Committee Friday approved tough new child welfare support laws that would order federal authorities to locate deserting fathers and make them support their children.

As a condition for eligibility, welfare recipients under the Aid for Dependent Children program would be required to cooperate with welfare officials attempting to locate the fathers.

Under committee additions to the welfare reform bill, the mother would be required to assign the government the right to locate the father and collect support payments for her children.

The provision would authorize the Internal Revenue Service, aided by the Social Security Administration, to seek court action for repayment by fathers of their children's welfare costs.

Pacific rowers reach Australia

SYDNEY (UPI)—Pacific rowers John Fairfax and Sylvia Cook arrived Friday at Baysman Island, about 30 miles off the Queensland coast on the Great Barrier Reef, according to the Australian Broadcasting Commission (ABC). The network said the English couple was in good condition and resting.

Fairfax and Miss Cook left San Francisco last April 25 to row across the Pacific in a 24-foot rowboat. They were last seen about 1,700 miles northeast of Brisbane on Feb. 28. Officers said they feared the two were killed in storms off the Australian coast.

100 arrested at air base

Viet bombing protests rise

By United Press International

About 100 antiwar protesters were arrested Friday when they tried to block gates of Westover Air Force Base in Massachusetts. Demonstrators clashed with police at Stanford University and the University of Texas and were forcibly removed from a downtown street in Detroit.

Some 2,000 University of Maryland students staged a peaceful rally at College Park, Md., as 600 National Guardsmen stood by to curb any new outbreak of violence on the campus.

An estimated 1,500 demonstrators marched down New York's Broadway to a rally in Times Square, blocking traffic in both directions.

Student strikes and demonstrations against increased American military action in Vietnam spread to many campuses and cities across the nation. Protesters staged sit-ins in the state capitols of New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Iowa and rallied at the North Carolina Capitol.

The student protests were centered in Ivy League schools of the East and, on most campuses, involved relatively small percentages of the student bodies. But demonstrations also were staged at universities and small colleges in the Midwest, South, Southwest and West.

Women's liberationists' efforts to take over the University of Texas campus radio station to broadcast antiwar views escalated into two demonstrations. Police used tear gas and a chemical disabling agent to break up the crowds, which retaliated by tossing rocks and bottles. No one was hurt.

About 2,000 protesters gathered on the University of Michigan campus at Ann Arbor. Members of the crowd smashed windows in the ROTC building, started small fires and vandalized furniture and records.

Fifteen persons were arrested at Detroit when more than 200 protesters blocked a street outside the Federal Building for two hours.

A band of protesters exploded tear gas in two campus buildings at Mankato (Minn.) State College to—as one student put it—"punish those not taking part" in a student strike.

Seven inmates of the federal prison at Danbury, Conn., perched atop a water tower—where they took up positions Thursday—and periodically shouted "stop the war."

A sit-in by blacks continued at Harvard University's administration building despite the serving of a court injunction forbidding it. The blacks were protesting Harvard's refusal to sell its stock in the Gulf Oil Corp., a large investor in the Portuguese African colony of Angola.

Classes were cancelled at Columbia University and Barnard College in New York.

Supervisors' responsibilities increasing over past years

By MAUREEN RUFE
Pocono Record Reporter
GILBERT — "The only thing that my township supervisors do," said a typical West End resident, "is plow snow. If they do a good job plowing the roads, I vote for them again next year — it's as simple as that!"

This is a typical response from West End residents who seem to think that all their local officials do is ride a snow plow.

In a random telephone survey conducted throughout the six townships in the West End last month, 87 out of 100 people indicated they voted for their township supervisors only because they knew how to take good care of their roads.

Indeed, about 20 years ago, all township supervisors really did do was maintain township roads. In fact, their title was even listed on the voters' ballot as "Road Supervisor."

During the last decade, however, other major responsibilities have crept into the job, and West End supervisors now find themselves confronted with planning and zoning commissions, establishing local police forces, approving major land subdivision plans, providing for township sanitation, settling road controversies between residents, and overseeing sewage control.

Low salaries
For their time in considering all these problems, the supervisors receive the phenomenal sum of $10 for each meeting they attend, and usually meetings are held once a month.

Newly elected supervisors are a bit more fortunate — they receive $15 a meeting. According to Pocono Township Secretary-Treasurer Lawrence Getz, the problem is that most people do not appreciate all the work the supervisors do for them.

"Today a supervisor has to be a versatile man that knows how to take care of roads," he said. "But who is no longer a back woodsman. The credentials have become more professional in the last eight years."

"The supervisors have to be able to decide on such matters as soil and water management, pollution, and subdivisions and solid waste problems, and they have to be prepared to donate a lot of time and thought to the townships," he continued. "Most residents don't realize this and there is very little thank you that goes with the job."

According to Atty. Lester Brown, township solicitor for both Pocono and Chestnut Hill townships, state statutes stipulate that the local officials should be responsible for "the general supervision of affairs of the township."

Quoting from Purdon's Volume 77 on Pennsylvania statutes, Brown emphasized that roads and their maintenance are an important consideration for supervisors.

General powers
Pointing to a thick section in the volume, Brown said there were, however, numerous general powers in addition to roads which could be enacted by the supervisors if they passed an ordinance to that effect.

"The township supervisors, for example, have the right to appropriate funds for Memorial Day, to prohibit nuisances, to take land for the National Guard by the right of eminent domain, and to provide burial plots for ex-servicemen."

They also have the right to act on abandoned cemeteries, public amusements, local airports, and local police forces. They can pass ordinances to provide for public safety and they have the right to enter into joint agreements with other municipalities.

A complete job description of the supervisors is impossible to enumerate — the powers are so varied and numerous. It is important to realize, however, that the job of any West End supervisors is not just as simple as plowing snow.

Important issues
Today, because of increasing growth in this rural part of the county, the local boards are forced to consider important issues like local law enforcement, planning controls and local park commissions.

More and more, the local politicians are relying on their solicitors for help in these new problems. The job is becoming more sophisticated and the care of roads is diminishing in priority.

When told that 85 per cent of the West End residents did not realize that township supervisors had duties to take care of in addition to road maintenance, Eldred board member Alton Dorshimer, said he wasn't surprised.

"I don't believe a lot of residents really know what we do," he said. "Some people think the only thing we actually do is plow snow."

Claude Possinger, a road supervisor from Chestnut Hill Township, emphasized that approximately three fourths of a township budget and three fourths of a supervisor's time are still devoted to roads. He said he thought this should still be a major concern for voters, but added that residents should realize how many meetings a month supervisors attend and how many different problems they must resolve.

Larry Butz, chairman of the Jackson Township board, said two prerequisites for today's supervisors are some working knowledge of local government and an interest in community affairs.

He said most supervisors have some knowledge of roads, but indicated this really isn't essential. He said supervisors can appoint a roadmaster and/or an engineer if needed.

"It would help if more people attended our meetings, so we could get a feeling of the majority of residents," said Butz. "We don't want to run our townships with a hammer."

In further comments, Butz predicted that in the near future, the townships would reach the point when they would have to maintain full-time municipal officials.

Changing times
Howard Buzzard, chairman of the Hamilton supervisors agreed with Butz' prediction and said that things have changed in the last five years because of "more demands from a lot of new people."

Oscar Bonser, a supervisor for 16 years in Ross Township, emphasized that residents don't realize how much time their supervisors contribute to township problems.

"More should attend our meetings," he said. "A lot of people grow old and things. If they came to our meetings, they'd know what's going on in our townships."

When asked to comment on the job of the township supervisor, one old-time West End resident uttered a few words that seem to sum up resident's opinions about the job.

"They get a lot of money for throwing some cinders on the road," he said. "What's all the fuss about? I've been throwing ashes on the road in front of my house for years — nobody ever paid me a cent!"

Council plans July trip

LEHIGH VALLEY — Seventy-six young men and nine leaders are expected to form the Minsi Trails Scout Council contingent at the Philmont Scout Ranch and Explorer Base in New Mexico in July.

Original plans called for 42 young men and five leaders to make the trip, but according to Woodrow Guth, Philmont Expedition Committee chairman, interest in the expedition started early and built up quickly.

The contingent is scheduled to depart for Chicago in two buses from Camp Minsi on July 10. At Chicago they will travel by railroad to Colorado Springs and are expected to arrive at Philmont on July 13. After 13 days at the ranch, the group will return to Trexler Scout Reservation.

Each year, scouts across the nation are given the opportunity for high adventure at the 140,000-acre ranch in the Rocky Mountains. Besides camping and hiking along the rugged, challenging trails, boys can pan for gold, fish and study such subjects as geology and forestry.

They will have the opportunity to see the Kit Carson Museum, tour abandoned gold-mining settlements and travel routes where wagon trails passed. Sightseeing trips to historic areas are included.

A meeting of boys and their parents will be held at 7:30 p.m. April 21 at the UGI Auditorium in Lehigh Valley Industrial Park.

County official addresses planners

BRODHEADSVILLE — Douglas Williams, executive director of the Monroe County Planning Commission was on hand Thursday night at the first meeting of the Chestnut Hill Township Planning Commission since the passage of the township subdivision ordinance.

Williams explained to the six-member board (there is still one seat vacant) the intricacies of studying preliminary and final plot plans and the procedure they should follow.

Board members also discussed the need for secretarial help although the matter was tabled pending further study.

A final plot plan was presented to the board by John Nash, developer of Sun-nybrook Acres. Action on the plan was delegated to the authority of the Monroe County Planning Commission who approved the preliminary plan for the tract.

My Dear Fellow Republicans —

The fate of the Republican Party of Monroe County, and its people, has been of great importance to me. It is for this reason that I am now urging you to elect Edward Katz as Republican Party Chairman.

Ed's service to the party extends over a period of thirty years and has been consistently dedicated and loyal. He has been a trusted lieutenant of all Republican County Chairmen under whom he has served. My husband had the greatest confidence in him and assigned to him most difficult tasks. Never was Ed found lacking. Indeed, his attitude and initiative were an inspiration to all around him.

At a time so important to our party and to our community, a time when crucial decisions must be made and vital leadership is necessary, it is important that we elect the right man to lead us.

I am prepared to place my faith in Ed Katz and for the common good I ask that all of you do the same.

Full ballot

Tuesday is Primary Day in Pennsylvania. When one observer saw a sample ballot the other day, he declared, "It has more characters than War and Peace!"

This might well be said about the Democratic ballot where there are contests for delegate to the National Convention (three to be selected out of twelve candidates) alternate delegate (one to be selected out of three), and state committee (four to be selected out of five).

In fact the large number of candidates on the Democratic ballot has even presented a problem in preparing the ballots for the voting machines.

In addition, the Democrats have five candidates listed for President, (Jackson, Humphrey, McGovern, Wallace and Muskie, in the order of their appearance on the ballot) plus a number of contests for local committeeman and committee woman posts.

On the Republican side, there is little action and GOP voters may be inclined to spend the day along a trout stream or on a Spring cleaning detail. In Pike County there isn't even a contest on the "grassroots" level for local committee.

As for the presidency, there is no listed GOP candidate, the space being blank which some partisans are mean enough to say is representative of certain policies of the Nixon administration.

Who will the Pike County Democrats favor for the Presidency? The County committee has endorsed Muskie but, then it seems everybody has endorsed the Maine Senator — except the voters in the several primaries. Since George Wallace did well in Pike County as a third party candidate in 1968, the April 25 Primary may disclose how much of his support was among Democrats.

While Pike County results are not likely to be subject to a great deal of analysis before or during the National Convention, it might be well to remember that the county has been noted for voting for the "wrong man" in presidential elections.

This reputation was gained by the rejection, at the polls in Pike County, of such figures as Abraham Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Harry Truman and John F. Kennedy.

Add to this the fact that the first Republican presidential candidate to capture the votes of Pike County electors was Warren G. Harding and it would seem that perhaps the eyes of the U.S.A. should be pointed in our direction on Tuesday after all.

Pocono scouts honored

TANNERSVILLE — Numerous members of Cub Scout Pack 85 were honored at a recent meeting. The pack is sponsored by the Pocono Township Fire Co.

Ross Wallingford, Rusty Johnson, Mitch Nevil, Keith Abrams and Jeff Frisby received Webelos colors and were transferred into the Webelos Den.

Webelos receiving activity pins were Jonathan Taylor, outdoorsmanship, forester and artist; Arlett Gannon, scientist, outdoorsmanship, traveler and artist; James Smith, athlete, outdoorsmanship and sportsman and Harold Bonser, citizenship, scholar, showman and sportsman.

Receiving Bobcat pins were Keith Abrams, Rodger Smith and Darius Markham. Chris Kinsley, Steven Wise and Jeff Frisby received Wolf badges.

Assets of region to be aired on TV

AVOCA — John B. Hibbard, president of the Economic Development Council of Northeastern Pennsylvania, has announced the April 24 "Town Meeting of the Air," to be televised at 8 p.m. on Channel 16, will focus on "Northeastern Pennsylvania — the Next Ten Years."

Howard J. Grossman, executive director of EDCNP, said the purpose of the program is "to view the region's assets and liabilities in planning for the region's next decade and to investigate resources which should be tapped to insure it is a prosperous one and to consider alternatives for development."

The EDCNP services Carbon, Lackawanna, Luzerne, Monroe, Pike, Wayne and Schuylkill Counties.

Present to lead the discussion, which will emphasize job opportunities, government, and environment, will be Professor Anthony J. Mussari, WNET-TV, editorialist and moderator of "Town Meeting," John Hibbard, and Grossman.

In addition, the audience will be composed of representatives from key regional organizations and institutions involved in improving the region. These people will serve as resource persons during the question and answer period.

The format of the program will feature a film showing the area as it was 20 years ago, as it is today, and depicting scenes of current trend setting development.

The program is built around the role of the economic development council as the regional planning and development organization for the seven-county region.

Ballot argues for national primary

Perhaps the best argument for a national primary system to nominate our candidates for president is this year's primary ballot. It is, to say the least, confusing.

Part of the confusion results from Democratic Party attempts to make the delegate — hence the candidate — selection more equitable and take such decisions out of the hands of the back room boys.

Under party reform rules, certain delegates for the first time may run committed to one or another candidate. Thus those of us voting in the 29th Senatorial District find ourselves confronted with a ballot containing no less than 13 delegates, three committed to Muskie, three to McGovern, one to Humphrey, two to Jackson and four uncommitted.

The idea is to pass along to the average voter some say as to who his state's delegation will support in Miami Beach in July. Compounding the confusion of names is a list of alternate delegates, two committed to McGovern, two to Muskie and two uncommitted.

Those in the Poconos who will be voting in the 20th Senatorial District face the same plethora of names on the voting machine, except there are only three delegates committed to McGovern, three to Humphrey, three to Muskie and four uncommitted, plus three alternates, one pledged to Muskie, one to McGovern and one uncommitted.

The voter has his choice of selecting delegates who will support his favorite candidate, or who will go the convention unencumbered and swing with whoever looks best at the moment.

All this to merely approach what a national primary system would accomplish automatically — give full voice to the entire electorate in the matter of choosing the man they want to vie for the White House.

When are people going to cease looking for complex means to retain their shreds of power and admit that a democracy worth the name vests that power in the people who make up the nation's population?

Keep historic names

"Hell's Kettle Road?" "Sal's Crotch Road?" It may sound improbable, but similar names may become official in the rural West End.

Ten West End service organizations are sponsoring a sort of popularity contest in which residents of that area may cast their votes, as it were, for various names to be given to many West End byways that now are nameless.

After the road name suggestions are in, a select committee will sift through the pile and select what it considers appropriate names to submit to the county Planning and Zoning Commission, which will in turn submit the names to township supervisors, who are responsible for naming roads in their respective bailiwicks.

We think that is a good idea, and commend the various organizations for coming up with the idea and forming the committee and its project.

We also are grateful that the committee seems bent on selecting names that will retain the historic aura of the area. That may result in some unusual names, but that's all to the good. We're a little tired of the "Blueberry Lanes" and Heavenly Garden Drives" that seem to proliferate in some of our newer housing developments.

We like the idea of simpler, more direct names that bear some relationship to their environment. "Hell's Kettle Road?" Why not? That's a name with some meat to it. Much better than "Candy Cotton Drive."

Before movies began moving Gloria Swanson was born (1899) and now at 73 she is starring on Broadway in the stage play "Butterflies Are Free," which we saw the other afternoon in New York. She swings with the agility of a 40 year-old and according to Mrs. B. wears no brassiere or girdle, not needed because of her fine figure moulded by a controlled health food diet about which she is sort of a nut. Swanson lacks a bit of the acerbic wit needed for the play but she is still a fine broth of a woman who will be playing young matron roles at 93.

The Pennsylvania Story

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The five Democratic presidential candidates on the Pennsylvania primary ballot April 25 — Republicans have no contest — have been asked by Columnist Mason Denison to serve as guest columnist to express in their own words why their particular candidacy should be supported.)

By GEORGE C. WALLACE
Democratic Presidential Candidate

HARRISBURG — By the thousand we have received letters from people in Pennsylvania. We have talked with them in person and on the telephone. They represent every walk of life — church people, business people, working people, older people, young people, veterans.

Their voices are the real voices of America for their words come from the heart. They are concerned. They know America has troubles. They know we have been on the wrong course. They want to get American on the right course.

The letters from Pennsylvania demonstrate strong knowledge of all the issues. Pennsylvanians know what is happening. They want to do something about it. They want action on the unfair tax system, crime in the streets, unemployment, decay of our cities, drugs, welfare loafers, foreign giveaways, imports that take jobs, turmoil and tensions.

What they want
They want to stop every type of pollution. They particularly want to stop pollution of the American dream. They want downward trends to be turned upward. They reach out for new greatness and new opportunities and new dreams for themselves and their families.

They want the kind of America we started out to build.

They want new hope — a return to confidence, sanity and decency in our daily lives. They want the ravaging storm to stop. They want to work in peace, sleep in peace, walk the streets unmolested, operate a business without interference, have security on a job, enjoy retirement without fear of high prices. They want to get ahead on a job and as a family and as a community. They want the real America.

I share with them their concern and

Jibes for candidates
WASHINGTON — The other day I was grumbling about the lack of humor in the current political scene and now it's suddenly occurred to me that perhaps the candidates would like to be funny, but simply are short of material. Today, with great generosity, I hereby donate to the principal competitors for president, the following jibes:

Oh, before going on, perhaps I'd better explain that the remarks following a candidate's name are not to be used by him, but against him by all the other candidates. Let you think I'm more partial to one candidate than another, let me assure you that I've tried to be equally irreverent to all. First, I think we should start with the leader.

President Nixon: He sure has balanced the economy — business may be down, but unemployment is up. I'm glad Nixon went to China, if only he'd taken a slow boat back! You have to admit this: As President, Nixon has made a great Secretary of State. They say this may be a dirty campaign, but I think Nixon will win in a mudslide.

Hubert H. Humphrey: He has his monogram on all his towels, but I happen to know that when he's in New York, he stays at the Henry Hudson Hotel. Listen, there's nothing wrong with Humphrey that lockjaw wouldn't cure. Humphrey is the oldest candidate in this campaign, but that's smart; most of us are too young to remember all his mistakes.

Maine goes
Edmund Muskie: They say that as Maine goes, so goes the nation. I say, if Muskie wins, there goes the nation! Muskie can't understand why crying in public lost him votes. After all, look how popular it made Jack Paar.

feelings. I say it is time we took off in a new direction — a new direction when our government and our leaders are not isolated from the heartbeat of the mainstream.

A new direction when we feel people, power going up to the government instead of government power crushing down on the people. We have had a quarter century of troubles. We go from one crisis to two to three. We never seem to find answers that profit the people.

From greatness as the strongest nation dollar-wise, military-wise, security-wise, job-wise, we have drifted along without a sail in a stormy sea of problems that begot new problems.

Administrations come and go. They never seem to change. Where one leaves off, it seems another picks up and repeats the same mistakes. The government has isolated itself from the people with an overwhelming bigness. Now people feel isolated from the government, islands apart, adrift in the confusion.

We have heard often that government closest to the people is the best government. It is. I ask the question: If our government and our leaders are isolated from the people and our people are overwhelmed by big bureaucracy, how then can we have the best government to serve the people.

Can be saved
I say this doesn't have to happen. America can be saved from this situation. America will be saved by the courage of average citizens in all walks of life who send a message to those in power that they don't like what is happening to them and their country. America will be saved by decent men and women who dare to dream the decent dream of a decent America. The average citizen and his action at the ballot box — this is the hope of our times.

The gap from darkness to a new light on a new course for America is not easily bridged but we can, we will, we must bridge it to make America what we started out to make it.

I stand shoulder to shoulder with the mainstream of people in Pennsylvania. Like them, I believe all things are possible for America. For if we do not dream the dream of new greatness and take personal action to attain it, we will be stagnated in old nightmares that will not let us sleep in peace.

Somebody should explain to the press that the reason Muskie was the front runner six months ago is because nobody else was running then.

George McGovern: Some say he's a "one-issue candidate." I think he's more of a back issue. But McGovern's speaking style has become a bit more exciting. . . . I hear he's been taking diction lessons from George Wallace. The way McGovern speaks out against the war, you'd think that somebody in this campaign was for it!

George Wallace: Instead of whistle-stopping, Wallace is going bus-stopping. Wallace hopes to throw the election into the House, I hope to throw it out of the house. A lot of people don't regard Wallace as a serious threat to win — but I hear that the White House orchestra has been practicing "Dixie." If Wallace does get elected, he can get a special license tag with his initials on it: KKK.

Henry Jackson: Who? Sam Yorty: Never heard of him; he must be a friend of Henry Jackson's. John Lindsay: Yes, maybe he's ready for a smaller job, like being President. He certainly can't handle anything as big as New York. (Enough for now. Maybe we'll do more of these after the conventions.)

So many secrets have been published lately that the Russians have been able to fire half their spies.

Letters to the Editor

Something about gypsy moths

Editor, The Record:
Judy Weidner of Allentown (letter to the Editor April 13), is unfortunately like too many people today . . . lots of criticism but no concrete suggestions to do something. (Sounds like some of the Presidential hopefuls, doesn't it?)

Honestly, she makes some pretty unsubstantiated statements . . . it's about time that truth look precedence and that the majority of the people are listened to." I wonder what she bases that "majority of the people" statement on? Did she take a Gallup Poll?

Regarding the truth, here are some facts from the U.S. Forest Service in a report issued December 13, 1971:

1. Studies in Connecticut show that the mortality rate of oak increased by 50 per cent following repeated defoliation.
2. Approximately two million acres were defoliated in 1971, of which 500,000 acres were 70 per cent to 100 per cent defoliated.
3. The incidence of tree mortality is increasing in both states (Pennsylvania and New Jersey), although the New Jersey infestation is probably two years advanced and the impact in Pennsylvania is yet to be realized. (In other words, we ain't seen nothin' yet!!)
4. Pike County has approximately 315,000 acres of forest area of which the gypsy moth defoliation of from five per cent to 60 per cent has occurred in about 150,000 acres (nearly one half). Monroe County, with about the same amount of forest area, has had five per cent to 60 per cent gypsy moth defoliation in 100,000 acres (about one-third). (Don't worry, Judy, if apathetic people like you are in the majority, Monroe County will catch up to Pike County fast!!).

5. Also, from figures published in The Record, it is apparent that over 95 per cent of Monroe County forest area will not be sprayed!

Now, with facts like these in mind, instead of adopting Judy's idea . . . "let the moths come, nature will eventually take care of them . . ." (even if it takes 20, 30, or 40 years!!), let's all of us concerned people do what we can about it now:

1. Look for and destroy gypsy moth egg masses by removal and burning or encasing. (Hurray for the Pocono Crickets, National Campers and Hikers Association and Mrs. Bartoch from Bangor and her plea for Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, Church groups, school groups and plain ordinary citizens participating in some hard and effective work).
  2. Use burlap around trees in May to trap caterpillars and empty them daily, destroying caterpillars.
  3. Make Moth Traps to hang in late July and August (see "Moth Trap Found for Homeowners" article in February issue of The Record).
  4. Then, destroy more egg masses until next spring.
- Yes, Judy, nature is wonderful, but it took some effort by thinking and hard working men to build the house you're living in. It will take the same kind of manual assistance to save our trees now. I'm 60 years old and can't wait 40 years for nature to do the job all by herself!!

Apathy dooms unborn

Editor, The Record:
A few years back a young girl was stabbed to death on the streets of Queens, N.Y. Though many of her neighbors heard her cries for help and even witnessed her murder, no one came to her assistance, no one even called the police. No one wanted to get involved.

The tragedy generated a great deal of indignation, of soul searching, of breast beating and any number of moralizing editorials throughout the country. If ever there was a consensus, it was that such a thing should never happen again.

It did happen again. In the enlightened year 1969 in Morristown, N.J. a man was stomped and beaten. Though the assault was witnessed by many, no one came to his assistance, no one even called police. No one wanted to get involved.

This time the indignation, the soul searching, the breast beating and the editorializing was on a much smaller scale. Morristown counted less than 20,000 inhabitants, New York is a city of millions.

In each instance a human being, that highest form of creation, short of the angels, was left bereft of assistance.

What may be only a horrendous nightmare today but a terrifyingly brutal actuality tomorrow is the threat of our state legislature following New York State in legalizing abortion. In giving everyone with an M.D. a license to kill, New York should be regarded as a pariah, not an exemplar.

Abortion does not even have the rationalized merit of euthanasia, it is a killing of convenience. Women, we are told, have a right to control their own bodies. That is a limited right at best. Suicide, for instance, is still regarded as both illegal and anti-social. Any rational person would question the exercising of a dubious right that negates another's certain right.

It is now a matter of how hardened in their apathy people have become. We can anticipate the cries of those slated for murder by advising our elected representatives in Harrisburg that this proposal does violence to our moral beliefs.

The unborn, more helpless than the Genovese girl in Queens or Donald Benway in Morristown, need our assistance now. We must become involved.

Lecture just public relations

Editor, The Record:
Dr. Oskar Morgenstern's lecture, "Analysis of the Space Shuttle as a Problem in Public Investment," clearly demonstrates that his attempt to justify the investment of the taxpayers' money on the space program was an exercise in public relations.

He used the clever ploy of minimizing the $3 billion allotted for the space program this fiscal year by pointing out that Americans spend the same amount for pet food. What he failed to mention, however, was that this vast sum of money for space exploration could have funded schools, hospitals, and urban renewal projects for which there is a greater national need.

Everyone has the right to promote his vested interest in business, or labor, or public welfare. As the director of Mathematics and the Market Research Corporation of America, Dr. Morgenstern and his enterprise obviously stand to profit from their work in behalf of the space program. It is no wonder that he would try to make its cost seem reasonable.

It's about time that Dr. Morgenstern and his space enthusiasts realize that American taxpayers are more concerned with the medical cost of removing gall stones than with fetching moon rocks and are more troubled by the blight of their cities than by the craters on the moon.

Urges Tocks meeting attendance

Editor, The Record:
The last open public hearing of the Tocks Island Regional Advisory Committee (TRAC) will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday in the Municipal Building at Port Jervis, N.Y.

This is the last chance to view the "steam-roller" action before the request for funding the dam is presented to the Senate and House Appropriations Committee at the end of April.

Many tax dollars will be added to the already staggering sum we now pay each year, for the questionable privilege of being told that we need a recreation site for 10 million-plus visitors each year and the power to support air-conditioners for the local inhabitants who won't be able to find a spot at the recreation site if we allow it to become a reality.

There reportedly are plans being formulated whereby the seven counties surrounding the proposed dam site will become the financial support (this means taxes) for the sewage system and its maintenance, added to the cost of the road network that will be necessary in the area.

Your senators and congressmen welcome the opinions of their constituents. Make yours known today, by adding your name to the imposing list of Tocks opposers that grows daily.

A recent strong reversal statement has been made by Supervisor John D. Bright, Orange County, N.Y. Louis V. Mills, Orange County Executive, publicly announced his opposition three weeks ago.

Complete reversals have been announced by Stewart L. Udall, former Secretary of the Interior, Congressman John Dow of N.Y. and Joseph M. McDade of Pa.

United State Senators Clifford Case, N.J., James Buckley, N.Y., Jacob Javits, N.Y. and Richard Schweiker, Pa., have expressed concern over the construction of the dam, without knowing the full adverse environmental impact on the Delaware River Basin.

A call to any newspaper office will give you the address of your senators and congressmen.

Urges guardrails on I-80

Editor, The Record:
I have questioned myself many times and have on numerous occasions made the comment that I have to write a letter to the Department of Transportation concerning Route 80 and especially the section in the Stroudsburg area.

Now, as always, it's being done after the tragedy has occurred.

I can't help but wonder how those who are supposed to show intelligence and foresight could have allowed such a death trap to be constructed.

But I'm writing this letter to ask a very specific favor of PennDOT. Would you please construct some type of guard railing between the four lanes of highway (in the median) in the Stroudsburg area and elsewhere on Route 80 where a car could cross it and enter the lanes of oncoming traffic.

I believe eight lives possibly could have been saved in the last two months if the Highway Department would have adhered to some of the basic factors in determining highway construction.

I am sick today and have been sick before over such tragedies of this type. I think any man, regardless of strength, would be sick today and I ask, why aren't you?

Volunteer Coordinating Center forms to clear services

Mrs. John Bitzer (upper right) and Mrs. John Meunier conduct a cooking class at the Salvation Army Citadel in East Stroudsburg... one of the many volunteer activities now being coordinated through the fledgling Volunteer Coordinating Center. (George Arnold Photo)

STROUDSBURG — If you knit, you're needed! Just as much as if you can cook, are skilled in homemaking, crafts, carpentry, art, music, gardening, sports, home repairs, secretarial skills and a variety of other everyday know-hows that run right through the ability to speak a foreign language.

A Volunteer Coordinating Center is currently being formed in Stroudsburg to serve as a clearing house in matching local agency needs with volunteer time and talent.

The center will also serve as a referral organization by putting individuals in search of assistance in contact with the appropriate agencies which can best serve their needs.

Currently, the center's most pressing need, according to Mrs. John Meunier, one of its coordinators, is in the area of transportation.

"Drivers are needed to take cancer and Mental Health-Retardation patients for treatments as well as for the Red Cross and other organizations," she explained.

Mrs. Meunier noted volunteers are also necessary to man the clothing room in the basement of the Stroudsburg Presbyterian Church as well as another maintained at the Main Street Methodist Church in Mount Pocono.

"In addition, volunteers are needed as tutors for students forced to drop out of school to enable them to finish their education and for Girl Scout and youth group leaders," she elaborated.

The center "attaches great importance to getting the right sort of volunteer into the right job," according to

Mrs. Meunier. "It wants placements to be productive and satisfying both to the agency and to the volunteer concerned."

Agencies served
The center presently serves the following agencies: Monroe County Clergy Association, Volunteer Services of Church Women United, the Red Cross, the Cancer Society, the Monroe-Northampton County Migrant Ministry, the Burnley Workshop, the Salvation Army, Mental Health-Mental Retardation, the Pleasant Valley Manor, Visiting Nurses Association, Meals on Wheels, the Monroe County Crippled Children and Adults Association, Inc., Monroe County Public Assistance, the Girl Scouts, the state Department of Health, the Pennsylvania Association for Retarded Children, the Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation, the Children's Bureau, Monroe County Day Care, and the Monroe County Probation Office.

The center's office is located in the Stroudsburg Presbyterian Church's office building.

To interest area residents in volunteer work and to explain the center's functions, a combination tea and meeting will be held at the church at 10 a.m. on Thursday, April 27. The speakers will be Mrs. Lee Topp, chairman and placement director of the Eastern Area Volunteer Association.

Requests for volunteers should be submitted to the center's office in writing with a description of the job, days and hours when volunteers are needed, the number of volunteers needed and the name of the supervisor to whom they are to report.

The center asks that requests be made well in advance of the time when the volunteer is needed to assure careful planning and an opportunity to fill the job satisfactorily. However, emergency requests will be considered, according to Mrs. Meunier.

She noted, as a matter of policy, the center will not refer volunteers within the following categories: If the job displaces a paid worker; if the job request is from a political organization; and if it is a request for the recruitment of solicitors for fundraising campaigns.

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

OLYMPIA, Greece — The woman from Detroit, Mich., who pre-empted the front seat of our bus needed her worry beads all day since she had an eagle-eye view of the road we traveled. The rest of us could see all the way down to eternity only when our side of the bus hung out over the mountain.

We crossed our great mountains on our way from the sea at Nauplia to Olympia traveling all the way through fabled Arcadia where nymphs once splashed in streams tumbling down through forests of fir and spruce and Pan played his pipes for the Arcadian shepherds.

Her fiancé is a production engineer in the crystal research division of the Isomet Corporation in Oakland, N.J. He attends Rutgers University.

An August, 1973, wedding is planned.

Clearview sets annual auction

STROUDSBURG — The Clearview Council of Parents and Teachers annual auction will be held on Monday, April 24 at 7 p.m. at the Clearview School, 200 N. Fifth St., Stroudsburg.

There will be a bake sale and refreshments. All donations for the auction can be brought to the school the night of the auction or before. To arrange for pick ups, contact Richard Deschriver at 421-2702.

There will also be a children's auction at the same time.

Arcadia as an example of what can happen to our world. The mountains are still there, their bald heads holding up the sky, but the forests and streams are gone. Today's shepherds are no romantic youths wooing the nymphs but old men with a herd of goats — an old woman with one donkey or little boys herding chickens.

Starting at dawn, we hadn't stopped at the monastery, 999 steps above Nauplia, even though, in the courtyard, there is a spring in which Hera used to bathe each year to renew her virginity. Of course, to even up things for the male members of the tour, we didn't stop where Hercules slew the Nemean Lion either.

At Tripolis, we did have a rest stop at Vytina, a resort town under the fir trees, where the populace carves things from lime and olive wood — we had yogurt with honey and saw family and friends laden with baby gifts arrive for a baptism at the new cinder block cathedral.

After several more mountains with hill towns spilling over like pink sea shells down a sand castle, we arrived at Olympia to little girls in blue waiting at our hotel above the museum to carry our bags the 28 steps to our room where our balcony looked down on giant wisteria in bloom, a formal garden with roses and exotic flowers and Greek columns far below.

That's where, to pause between wars, athletes, poets, sculptors and philosophers gathered every four years to compete for no other prize but the Laurel Wreath. The original Olympics were held from 776 B.C. to 426 A.D. and, thanks to a Frenchman, Baron de Courbetin, whose heart is buried here, were revived in 1896 in the new stadium we saw in Athens.

The stadium, although it held 45,000 people, isn't much, but the remainder of the ruins — the gymnasium, the palaestra, the restaurant and guest houses for the nobles, the workshop of Phidias and the one original sculpture left, the Hermes of Praxiteles, plus the scale model of the original centered around the Heraion, most ancient and sacred temple in Greece — were tremendous.

We also saw the altar where this summer the sun, through a magnifying glass, will light the Olympic flame to be carried by runners to Athens and all the way to Munich.

Land developers discuss sewage

HAZLETON — Testimony on Pennsylvania's proposed sewage facilities regulations by representatives of the Pennsylvania Vacation Land Developers Assn. will be the major subject of the organization's quarterly membership meeting scheduled for April 21 at the Holiday Inn at Hazleton.

The testimony was presented March 30 before the Environmental Quality Board in Harrisburg, and it will be reviewed by the membership at the meeting.

Dr. Richard Ellison, vice president of E. D'Appolonia Consulting Engineers Inc., of Pittsburgh, and Raymond L. Howe, executive secretary of the association, were two witnesses at the Harrisburg hearing.

They offered proposals which, if adopted, would differentiate between sewage treatment facilities for recreational or leisure home developments and ordinary first home developments.

The meeting will also feature discussions on proposed legislation in Harrisburg which would require organizations developing land in Pennsylvania to file property reports with state officials.

New federal regulations governing property report filings with the Department of Housing and Urban Development will also be discussed.

The PVLDA is the statewide association for the second home land development industry and currently represents 52 land developments and approximately 90 associate members.

Responding to other testimony offered at the Harrisburg hearing, which was critical of recreational home development in the Poconos, Howe said "providing for on-plot sewage disposal in rural areas in a responsible manner can be the difference between quality development to meet consumer demand, and having no development at all."

He stated this position was supported by representatives of the Pennsylvania Home Builders Association in their testimony at the same hearings.

He added that both the PVLDA and the HBA were opposed to testimony presented by Thomas Klock, executive director of the Tocks Island Regional Advisory Council, who argued in favor of adopting regulations which would substantially require central sewage treatment systems in the first stages of rural and second home land development.

Rehab clients increase

Record Harrisburg Bureau
HARRISBURG — The number of Monroe Counties taking advantage of rehabilitative services offered by the Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation has shown an upswing during the past half-dozen years.

The conclusion was reached by the State Department of Labor and Industry under whose jurisdiction the bureau falls.

A department study shows that during the past fiscal year, 209 vocational rehabilitation cases from Monroe County were handled by the bureau, as compared to 140 in 1965, 169 in 1967 and 141 in 1969.

The expenditures for servicing these vocational rehabilitation cases from the county also increased — $6,000 in 1965, $48,000 in 1967, $41,000 in 1969 and $56,000 in the past year.

In Pike County rehabilitation services were provided for 49 countians last year, as compared to 35 in 1965, 27 in 1967, and 27 in 1969, while expenditures for these services increased — $12,000 in 1965, $4,000 in 1967, $8,000 in 1969 and $20,000 last year.

The rehabilitative services provided by the bureau are designed to assist those persons disabled as a result of industrial accidents, public accidents, diseases or compulsive occupation, via training and placement in new vocational areas.

Women outnumber men

Special to the Record
STROUDSBURG — Mono to single men, Monroe County is the place. It is one of the limited number of communities in the United States where there is a surplus of marriageable women.

The imbalance exists despite the fact that the state of wedlock is a very popular one in the local area, where a larger proportion of the population is married and a smaller proportion single than in many parts of the country.

The surplus is such that there are 102 single women locally for every 100 single men.

The marital status of the population is reported by the Census Bureau, based upon its latest national survey.

It shows that the ratio of single men to single women is much greater in some localities than in others.

In Monroe County, the pattern is the reverse of that found in most sections of the United States. Nationally, although there are more women than men in the population, the number of unmarried men is usually greater than the number of unmarried women.

In the local area, on the other hand, the number of single men and boys over the age of 14 amounts to 4,253, while the number of single women and girls in that age bracket is only 4,317.

The figures refer to local residents who were never married. Divorced and widowed persons are not included.

Throughout the United States as a whole, 28.6 per cent of the male population and 22.4 per cent of the female population over 14 are single, according to the Census Bureau.

Somers elected to arthritis post

PARADISE VALLEY — Frank Somers was elected treasurer of the board of the Monroe County Unit of the Arthritis Foundation at a dinner meeting Thursday night.

Somers' election followed the acceptance of the resignation of Joseph A. Lisicky from that post. Lisicky resigned because of business reasons.

It was also announced that William V. Nixon has accepted the post of campaign chairman for the 1972 fund drive.

Featured speaker at the annual dinner meeting was Dr. Francis A. Lovecchio, East Stroudsburg orthopedic surgeon.

He addressed himself to what he termed the three basic concepts of arthritis; its meaning to the patient, its meaning to the physician and its meaning to Monroe County as a whole.

Lovecchio said the public has very little accurate information on arthritis, and that "three out of five patients entering a doctor's office are greatly misinformed about arthritis."

He said too many patients feel that a diagnosis of arthritis means "an end to a meaningful life and even their self-respect."

Lovecchio said that in the late 1950s there was a surge in the treatment of arthritis. "Many of the younger physicians who have had training in the diagnosis and treatment of arthritis since the 1950s are much more aware of modern care for the victims of the disease."

He noted that Monroe County first benefited from modern concepts and treatment of arthritis in 1964 when these newly trained physicians began practicing in the county.

He pointed out that in rural areas such as Monroe County, the vast majority of people have no concept of modern arthritis treatment. "In an area such as ours populated by working people, arthritis can be disastrous to a small businessman or employee unless properly treated."

Lovecchio continued, "The vast majority of arthritis sufferers do not receive the treatment they should because many of them are not aware that it can be treated."

He said one of the functions of the Arthritis Foundation is to help educate people in the effects of arthritis and its proper treatment.

"They must be made to realize that they are not hopelessly doomed, and if properly cared for, they can lead reasonably normal lives. There has been no cure found for arthritis, but it can be treated," he concluded.

Vo-tech's new director outlines position, plans

By CONRAD GROVE
Pocono Record Reporter
WASHINGTON, N.J. — "The important thing to remember about vocational education is that it's a total community commitment."

Sure, one important thing everybody sees after graduation is jobs.

But the most important thing is vocational education pulls in industry. That affects everybody's standard of living.

"We'll directly contribute to help the local factories better themselves. And this is what this country is built upon — opportunity."

So says Dr. Walter E. Brown, newly-named director of the Monroe County Area Vocational Technical School. Brown, principal of the Warren County Technical School just outside of Washington, N.J., will assume his duties June 1.

Brown is a former assistant director for New Jersey's vocational education division, a joint program with Rutgers University, where he received his doctorate.

He left Rutgers to work at the high school level.

No, I don't feel I'm stepping down. Rutgers was part of rounding out my education. But what I found at that level is you're several steps removed from directing quality education.

Directorship is the position

Dr. Walter E. Brown

Chamber discusses services

Monroe vo-tech school's percentage may be the highest in the state for first year operation.

He proposes night classes starting in the school's second operating year. "This is the way a person presently on the unemployment rolls, by his own initiative, can get off," says the 37-year-old.

He contends it's also "very typical" for a graduate to economically equal or exceed his father's after two years.

As a high school teacher for 10 years, he claims more disciplinary problems exist in high schools than vo-tech facilities.

It's true that many of the students who choose vocational education choose it as an escape. But we find they come to like school after the first semester, when they can see themselves as successful."

While he believes in college education "after a student is mature enough to know what he wants," Brown advocates vocational education first.

"There's a much greater opportunity today for a youth to advance through a skilled trade than through a college education. And there's still greater opportunity for the student who gets a trade in high school and then goes on to college part-time."

He's the one who's going to get the executive spot because he's got the experience."

STROUDSBURG — A need to get down to business on ways to consolidate services such as water, sewers and protection agencies within the Stroudsburgs was agreed to by directors of the Pocono Mountains Chamber of Commerce Friday.

In fact, after listening to the recommendation of the Community Services Committee, the directors agreed to plan the "general" May meeting and lunch around consolidation with a speaker from the Economic Development Council.

Meeting at the Beaver House, the directors also voted to endorse resolutions of the local businessmen's association in opposition to Sunday sales other than food. They turned the proposal over to their Legislative Committee for more formal action, if desired.

Other action urged by the Community Services Committee, on which only discussion followed, was a need to improve parking conditions in downtown Stroudsburg and to take a more active role in the Schaefer 500 at Pocono auto race.

The meeting was Ralph Reppert's first as executive director of the Chamber and his last to report as chairman of the Industrial Development Committee. In the latter capacity he said negotiations were continuing with a firm from Finland which requires $800,000 in financing to open a plant for the manufacture of mobile prefabricated homes.

Jobs preserved

Reppert also noted that the sale of Pocono Foundry including preservation of about 80 jobs could be finalized this week.

The Internal Affairs Committee chairman, J.L. Cohen, obtained board action on approval of $100 as the Chamber's annual sponsoring share for the Northeastern Pennsylvania Economic Development Council, and on a $250 annual salary increase for Bertha Smith, the Chamber secretary.

Boro, ESSC officials talk about mutual problems

By GARY GROSSMAN
Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — Borough and East Stroudsburg State College officials met behind closed doors Thursday to identify and discuss mutual problems.

The meeting came to light when the two parties issued a joint release Friday that stated, "Those in attendance mutually identified such problems as the need for better and more frequent communication between the two groups."

The issues discussed by officials of East Stroudsburg State College and the borough councilmen included fire and police protection, capital utility projects such as water and sewage.

No mention was made in the official release of any discussion of the student housing issue in East Stroudsburg. That borough has an ordinance restricting students to certain living units in designated areas of the borough.

The student senate has requested action from the borough amending the ordinance to expand the area of student housing throughout the borough.

One borough councilman said the issue was discussed, but not "deeply." He said the council will meet with the students and a committee to study the matter will be established.

Another committee — a "College-Council Committee" — was one possibility explored behind the closed doors.

"We didn't accomplish anything concrete," said a borough spokesman, "but we aired problems."

No pledges from the college on funding borough projects were made at the meeting. It is known, however, that the municipality will expect some help from the college in concrete form in order to help pay for the college's share of utilities in the borough.

Equitability questioned

School fund plan rapped

STROUDSBURG — A proposal by Gov. Milton Shapp for "pay-for-what-you-get" school financing got short-changed locally.

Under the program, persons would be taxed on the amount of education they have received. Shapp dubs the proposal the National Education Trust Fund.

He says the fund could mean the end of local school property taxes and would finance a major portion of education costs from primary through graduate levels.

Shapp said a college graduate, for example, would pay a fixed percentage of his income each year. A high school graduate would pay a smaller percentage.

To Lee Bachston, this means "it'll cut down on overcrowded colleges." He interprets it to mean high school graduates in well-paid vocational fields could conceivably pay less taxes than college graduates who teach.

"You'd be paying for a college education all your life," says the East Stroudsburg State College sophomore.

"Shapp's nuts. He's finally flipped," asserts Lee Trager, an ESSC graduate biology major. "Education doesn't necessarily mean you get a higher salary." Both Bachston and Trager plan to teach.

Shapp said his proposal, not increased federal or local tax-

Tocks forum cancelled

EAST STROUDSBURG — The "Stop Tocks" Committee will apparently be talking to themselves today as three government agencies turned down the group's request for a Tocks Island forum scheduled for today.

The group, composed mainly of East Stroudsburg college students, sent letters of invitation to the Army Corps of Engineers, the Delaware River Basin Commission and General Public Utilities, hoping for a pro and con discussion of the dam before the April 25 referendum.

None of the three organizations accepted. The college's radio station had prepared to broadcast the talk live.

It is unfortunate that the official agencies responsible for this important project would not agree to debate the issue before local residents," said David Rheinheimer, a member of the group.

"We are the people most affected by these large-scale federal projects and the people most ignored by the national policy makers."

Rheinheimer claims the Corps of Engineers replied they "merely did the work," the DRBC said they wouldn't participate "where the topic, adversaries, ground rules and format already have been arranged and announced publicly," and the General Public Utilities stated their thinking "can be done most meaningfully and usefully in writing."

STROUDSBURG — When the Tocks Island Regional Advisory Council's (TIRAC) executive committee meets today, it will be asked to reconsider its opposition to the mammoth sewerage waste treatment system adopted for the area by the Delaware River Basin Commission (DRBC).

TIRAC had gone on record earlier in the year as opposing the $362 million, tri-state system which the DRBC intends to foster to prevent the proposed Tocks Island Reservoir from becoming polluted.

Thomas Klock, TIRAC director-secretary, said he will present a resolution to council members at this

That help may come in the form of direct assistance to the borough from the college. Borough Manager Donald Gage was informed of financial transfer programs between other state colleges and host municipalities in Pennsylvania.

He is expected to contact an official at Shippensburg State College to investigate that institution's arrangement with its host municipality.

Another possibility will be college-council cooperation in attacking the state legislature for a bill tailored specifically to East Stroudsburg.

Basis for attack

The probable basis for such an attack would be the proportion of college clientele being served by East Stroudsburg's sewer and water systems.

At last census, the borough was tallied at a 7,800 population including a college population of 3,400 or roughly half.

In order to consider possible action, the borough will have to gather information on the college's expansion plans for the future. That was one purpose of the meeting and will be the subject of future meetings.

Councilman Charles Merring of East Stroudsburg's Second Ward said funding was not the purpose of the meeting. "Capital contributions were not stressed," Merring said, "it was just an informal session."

He said he did not know if funding would be the subject of future meetings.

Merring said the town-college meetings should have been initiated a long time ago, but there never seemed to be enough interest expressed.

He credited the college's new president, Dr. Darrell Holmes, with a sincere interest in establishing better relationships between the college and the borough.

"There has to be a time to start somewhere," Merring said.

education. The only fair way to tax the people is a graduated income tax."

John Mills, Pleasant Valley superintendent, dredges one saving grace. "It's all very fine for those people who are receiving their education completely from the state and other agencies. They definitely owe it."

"But," Mills adds, "for that young man who goes forth, working 14 hours a day throughout the summer to pay for his education by himself, it smells to high heaven."

Determining factor

Shapp said both levels of income and education would be used to determine the amount each person pays.

"Let's face this fact," he said, "The alternatives to financing increased demands for education do not exist in any plan based upon increasing taxes from any presently available source."

He said the fund would be financed by the federal government until the first batch of high school and college graduates begin paying into the fund. That could be anywhere from 13 to 20 years.

He contended the fund, coupled with other state and federal aid to education, could pay up to 90 per cent of each school district's annual expenses.

Money from the fund would not be used for school construction. Shapp said the aim "is to invest in people and not buildings."

John Rohner, left, and Tom Rhoner, instructors of the Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation Course offered at the General Hospital of Monroe County, demonstrate the correct procedure for external heart massage. Both men are with the Bushkill Emergency Corps.

The course was sponsored by the Keystone Heart Association.

CPR is a specialized technique which couples mouth-to-mouth resuscitation with external heart massage to save the life of a victim of cardiac arrest.

Instructors of the course were Tom and John Rohner, of the Bushkill Emergency Corps. They were assisted by Dr. David Boyer of the General Hospital of Monroe County.

Participating in the course were 45 ambulance crewmen representing the following counties and squads:

Monroe County — Barrett, West End, Bushkill, General Hospital of Monroe County, and the Pocono Snow Drifters.

Pike County — Hemlock Farms, Promised Land and Tafton.

Wayne County — Jenkins and Hawley.

Also taking the course were eight nurses from the General Hospital of Monroe County and five members of the general public.

The course is offered periodically by the Keystone Heart Association as an educational service for the general public and medical personnel.

An association spokesman said certified CPR personnel are encouraged to participate in the CPR Instructors Course held each November in Scranton.

TIRAC to reconsider stand on sewer plan

STROUDSBURG — When the Tocks Island Regional Advisory Council's (TIRAC) executive committee meets today, it will be asked to reconsider its opposition to the mammoth sewerage waste treatment system adopted for the area by the Delaware River Basin Commission (DRBC).

TIRAC had gone on record earlier in the year as opposing the $362 million, tri-state system which the DRBC intends to foster to prevent the proposed Tocks Island Reservoir from becoming polluted.

Thomas Klock, TIRAC director-secretary, said he will present a resolution to council members at this morning's meeting in the Port Jervis municipal building that would endorse the system, noting the DRBC plan adopted last month is considerably more flexible than the interstate agency's original position.

However, Klock said the TIRAC endorsement would be contingent on three conditions:

that the DRBC would fully coordinate implementation efforts with TIRAC and appropriate county agencies; that the DRBC would conduct preliminary design work in which TIRAC would be a participant; and that the DRBC would recognize the limited financial capability of the region's local governments.

Bolding sets meet record

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI)

Jim Bolding of Oklahoma State flattened the 440-yard hurdles field Friday at the Kansas Relays, skimming the barriers in 50.4 seconds for a meet record.

Bolding, who won at the Texas Relays two weeks ago in 50.3, will attempt a sweep of the Midlands relays circuit next week when he goes against world recordholder Ralph Mann at the Drake Relays.

Bolding led all the way, whipping defending champion Mike Cronholm of Rice, who finished second in 51.2. Bolding's 50.4 eclipsed the record of 50.5 set by Cronholm last year.

Illinois and Kansas captured the only two university relays run Friday.

Jack O'Brian's

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — Pamela Mason will play herself in Woody Allen's "Everything About Sex" movie. She should get stunt pay. . . . Has ABC-TV got news for neutralized broadcaster Jim Boulton? . . . Acting Atty Gen'l Richard Kleindienst perhaps should switch to diplomacy. "I'm not mad," he said about Jack Anderson's attacks. "Before he started attacking me, a lot of people didn't even know who I was."

Sean Connery's percentage of the last James Bond flick (he gave it all to Scottish children's charities except his bare expenses) will give the orphan kids at least $6 million. . . . CBS Pres. Frank Stanton ordered TV newshawk Jim Jensen to cut his hair, so how come he doesn't insist CBS-owned Yankee Pres. Mike Burke cut his? . . . Reason they shifted the "Valachi Papers" picture to Italy was because of pressure in N.Y. City. The pressure consisted of militants' savage demands for $25,000 in front and 12 per cent of the flick's gross.

"Gentlemen's Agreement" novelist Laura Z. Hobson was hospitalized. . . . Isaac Hayes

(he won for his "Shaft" music) gave the Oscarcast its warmest thank-you speech — dedicated to his 80-year-old grandmother "who kept me on the paths of righteousness."

Alan King's opening remark that he could just sense millions of people all over the U.S. wondering why he rated as an Oscar host was a precise estimate of a nation's living room wonderment. . . . Ditto Sammy Davis (he also wondered). . . . Ditto Joe Namath and Joey Heatherton who didn't. . . . Helen Hayes (a real star!) was endearing — and has the warm tall stature shallow intruders lack; where oh where were Cary Grant, Fred Astaire, Joan Crawford, Claudette Colbert, etc.?

Michel Le Grand had no best tune-competitor at all; the rest really weren't runners-up but runners-down. . . . Jane Fonda rated her Oscar, but her humorless, portentously enigmatic restraint about saying lots more was childish pretentiousness. . . . Lads who don blue shirts for the TV cameras should realize it's not necessary any more to diffuse the once lens-dazzling white haberdashery.

Fella who accepted the foreign Oscar for the fine "Finzi-Continis" film delivered a mini-length arrogant speech and ended with, "I humbly thank you." . . . Raquel Welch is one of the few officially installed "sex symbols" who doesn't strike us as female impersonators. . . . Cloris Leachman almost matched Isaac Hayes for the nicest thank-you for her supporting-doorstop.

Betty Grable looked fine for her age, 56. . . . Not many knew who Oscar-hander-out James Caan was, but after "The Godfather" they will next year. . . . Gene Hackman's best-actor award was deservedly popular. . . . Leslie Caron matured as just as cute as her early-ballet MGM period.

Bob Hope's Oscar lead-in was one of his brightest TV shows ever. . . . Natalie Wood plainly had learned her every Oscar-presenter word and automatic gesture; she looked like a slot machine. . . . Of all the "French Connection" winners, only Gene Hackman thanked recently exonerated ex-N.Y. cop Eddie Egan ("Popeye" of the flick), without whose dedicated detective work the all too true drug-importing caper never would have reached celluloid.

The Charlie Chaplin special Oscar was richly deserved; his long-gone ignorant-ingenuous-pretentious political polarization — he's a gold-bearing capitalist at last — and his headlined old H'wood sex-court cases must be set totally aside from the fact that he was the definitive protean clown of all cinema history.

Offensive smoker

Dear Ann Landers: My brother's wife, Olga, lights one cigaret off the other. I've seen her forget she has one going in the ash tray and she lights another one.

My husband and I do not smoke. We find Olga's continual smoking a nuisance.

Last night we were playing cards and Olga was, as usual, smoking up a storm. I said, "Please blow it over there. I don't want your lung cancer." She replied, "Second-hand smoke is harmless. You're getting crochety." I say a person does not need to inhale smoke to be harmed by it — that being around smoke can be damaging. What do you say, Ann?

Choking in Sioux Falls

Dear Choking: Never mind what I say, here's what the Interstate Commerce Commission said when they ruled that smokers must sit in the back of the bus. "Second-hand smoke is an extreme irritant to humans, particularly with respect to its effect upon eyes and breathing." Furthermore, Dr. D.M. Cousin of Paris at a recent European council on smoking said: "Nonsmokers can inhale smoke equivalent to one pack if they spend a day in a smoke-filled room."

Dear Ann Landers: As the owner of show dogs who travels a great deal I might be of help to people who would like to take their pets along when they go on vacation.

The American Kennel Club has provided us with a letter to present at hotel and motel registration desks. The letter states that we will keep the dogs quiet and that we agree to pay for any damage. So far, we have never been denied lodging and our dogs have never damaged anything.

Here are a few simple rules: Never leave the pet alone. If you go out to eat, put the pet in a well-ventilated car and keep the car parked where you can see it from the dining room window. If this isn't possible, buy food that can be eaten in the room. If this doesn't appeal to you, leave your pet in a kennel when you travel.

A Dog Lover Who Cares

Dear Lover: Thanks for the suggestions. They make sense.

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious — lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity." Send 35 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to this newspaper.

Forget her

By Jean Adams

BREAK: (Q.) I really care for Beth. We have gone steady for 19 months. Then I was in a school play and took off the ring she gave me because didn't fit the part in the play.

She thought I didn't care any more, and started going with my best friend. I called her and asked her to come back for me. She asked for a week to think about it. I waited a week and called again. She asked for another week and I said O.K. That was last night and this is really hurting. Can you help me?

Sad in South Carolina.

(A.) Beth made very much out of very little. She seems to have been looking for an excuse to dump you. Now she seems to be trying to rub it in.

Nineteen months is a long time to go steady. If I were you I would say it was enough and start out new with a new girl.

PAIN: (Q.) I usually don't write such personal things. But I have to know. It's my breasts. They hurt. They have been hurting since Christmas. Can you tell me why? I am an 11-year-old girl.

Super-Tender in Texas

(A.) When a boy or girl hurts persistently anywhere — no matter how personal the place — the person to see is a doctor.

Go with your mother to see your doctor, and tell him about your pain. Answer his questions fully. Don't hold anything back because of modesty. Let him check you if he asks to, which he probably will.

(Want personal answers to your questions? Write to Jean Adams, care of this newspaper, P. O. Box 2402, Houston, Texas 77001. Only letters that include a stamped, self-addressed envelope can be answered.)

SOUTH
♠ K 74
♥ A Q 98
♦ K 82
♣ K 63

The bidding:
South West North East
1♥ Pass 3♥ 3♠

Opening lead — eight of spades.

If you look at all four hands it would seem that declarer must go down one after West leads his singleton spade against four hearts. East wins with the ace and returns the queen, covered by South with the king and ruffed by West.

West returns the jack of diamonds and the outlook certainly seems grim for declarer, who appears to have a spade and a diamond to lose. But if South puts his best foot forward, he winds up making the contract, and furthermore, there is nothing the defenders can do about it.

He wins the diamond return with the king, draws two rounds of trumps, both defenders following suit, then cashes the A-K of clubs and ruffs a club in dummy. Eight tricks having been played, this is the position:

West
♠ 1097
♥ 107

East
♠ J 1095
♥ Q9
♦ 82

At this point, East having followed to three rounds of clubs, declarer knows for certain he will make the contract. He realizes that East started the hand with six spades, two hearts and three clubs, and therefore cannot possibly have more than two diamonds.

Accordingly, declarer cashes the ace of diamonds and next plays a spade, forcing East to win and return a spade. This allows South to discard his diamond loser as he ruffs in dummy to bring home the contract.

Dollars$ for John irritate teachers

By DIANE K. SHAH
Dow Jones-O'Hare News
SAN ANTONIO — Uncle Sam has devised a scheme to wheedle better grades out of Johnny. Simply pay teachers and parents if Johnny makes substantial progress this year. Though the reward money is now up for grabs, the government may have a hard time convincing anyone to reach for it.

Begun last fall in San Antonio, Cincinnati, Jacksonville, Fla., and Oakland, Calif., the plan is no more than a new twist to the old parental ploy of paying Johnny 50 cents for every "A" he brings home. Only here the government will reward teachers and parents instead. The bigger the year-end gains, measured by standardized tests, the bigger the bonus. Teachers stand to make up to $1,200 a classroom, parents up to $100 a child.

With so much cash at stake, one imagines teachers and parents goading, cajoling, and exhorting their charges into Whizkid form.

Take Mrs. Yolanda Nieto, a fifth-grade teacher. What is she doing to win the pay-off? "Nothing I didn't do before," she insists.

How is Mrs. Gloria Nelson egging on her third-grade son? "I tell Darryl he has to do his homework before he can go out and play. But then, she adds, 'I always have.'"

Their attitudes seem typical. To many persons the concept doesn't seem quite cricket.

"The biggest objection we get is that parents should not be paid to be parents and teachers are already being paid to do their job," concedes Edward Glassman, the national project director.

Ironically, many of the complainants are those in the running for the prize money. Mentors say there must be a more scrupulous way to earn a buck. And everybody seems to be sitting tight, waiting for Uncle Sam to take his latest wrinkle back to Washington, D.C.

Still, nobody has announced that he will turn down the money. And at this point nobody can be sure that the $770,000 experiment won't work.

Devised and financed by the U.S. Office of Education, the teacher-parent incentive program is the latest in a series of innovative measures to get children, especially disadvantaged ones, to improve their substandard reading and arithmetic skills.

The government figures that what Johnny needs is a bit of coaxing in the classroom and at home, and what better inducement than money?

Teachers think it is a fine idea to get parents, most of whom they never hear from, involved. But the notion that they too need an additional incentive affronts teachers' professional pride. "Doctors don't get paid more to dispense medicine in ghettos," complains Mrs. Maggie Cox, a language-arts teacher at Booker T. Washington Elementary here. "We consider ourselves in the same category of professionalism, and we shouldn't have to be paid extra to do our job."

Railroads hit crew laws

By LEWIS M. PHELPS
Dow Jones-O'Hare News

The nation's railroads seem to be on the verge of winning a major battle in their prolonged "featherbedding" war with the railway unions: The abolition of state "full-crew" laws.

The laws specify how many crewman a railroad must employ to run a train. The railroads say they can do this with four men, or even fewer, but "full-crew" states require them to add an additional man or two in the name of safety. Altogether, railroads say this forces them to employ about 7,500 "excess" workers.

A decade ago, 16 states had full-crew laws. But persistent railroad lobbying has whittled that number down to three.

Strong moves are underway, meantime, to get full-crew laws off the books or water them down in the remaining states — Indiana, Wisconsin and Arkansas.

If the railroads succeed in these states — and most observers, including union men, think they will — their cost savings could be substantial, even though they have pledged to eliminate the "excess" jobs only by attrition.

Railroad groups in the states involved say their eventual (annual) wage savings could amount to a total of $75 million.

Final victory in the full-crew fight would be the railroads' biggest anti-featherbedding gain since a 1963 federal arbitration award permitted the eventual elimination of 30,000 firemen's jobs on diesel locomotives. Victory also would remove legal barriers against securing more job reductions in future labor talks.

The railroad that stands to benefit most from a full-crew victory is the hard-pressed Penn Central, which claims that it alone employs some 4,300 "excess" workers because of such laws.

Full-crew repeal offers "the greatest single impetus to a successful reorganization" of the ailing line, says William H. Moore, president and chief executive.

Victory in the full-crew fight wouldn't mean, of course, that the featherbedding war has been completely won by the railroads.

A special commission appointed by President Kennedy in 1962 to examine railroad employment concluded that some 40,000 of the 225,000 operating employees then in the industry occupied "non-productive" jobs, and it's estimated that two-thirds of those jobs still exist.

Nonetheless, as the full-crew results indicate, the railroads have been attacking the issue with particular success of late, a development that is widely attributed to a change in tactics on their part.

On the negotiating scene, for instance, greater bargaining flexibility on the railroads' part is credited with getting some relaxation recently of old rules that prohibited so-called over-the-road train crews — those that operate trains from city to city — from working in switchyards and from running their intercity trains more than 100 miles in a "working day."

The rules still exist, but they have been eased for certain specific runs in return for strong railroad guarantees that the jobs of affected workers will be protected.

On the legislative front, railroads are exhibiting considerably greater sophistication in tackling such issues as full-crew laws.

In Wisconsin, for example, instead of concentrating on the old, unsuccessful tactic of lobbying with individual legislators, the railroads have mounted a big public-relations campaign to convince the public that the state's full-crew law should be repealed.

The railroads also are proposing a freight surcharge in the state to recover the extra $12.7 million a year they say they have to spend on wages because of the law.

Last year 1,900,000 drivers got the message.
The hard way.

They tailgated the car in front of them. And killed or injured 245,000 people.

The guy who tailgates is looking for trouble. Pure and simple. If the car ahead suddenly slows down or stops, he's got nowhere to go but into an accident. You could call tailgating the most senseless of all bad driving habits.

Because it's deliberate. Tailgaters know exactly what they're doing. They should also know that they won't get where they're going any faster. And may never get there at all.

Your new car dealer reminds you that for every ten miles an hour, you should keep an interval of at least one car-length between you and the car ahead. And, in wet weather or at night, you should give yourself even more room to spare. You might call it living room.

U.S. voters now middle-of-road

By LOUIS HARRIS

Since the last Presidential election, American voters have become considerably less willing to describe their political philosophy as "conservative."

In 1968, 37 per cent classified themselves that way. Today, four years later, the number who report they are right-of-center has dropped to 29 per cent. A plurality of Americans, 35 per cent, now prefer to be characterized as "middle-of-the-road."

With this apparent shift of political gravity toward the center, President Nixon is now viewed as more conservative than the general public rates itself. On the other hand, two would-be Democratic opponents, Sen. Hubert Humphrey and Sen. Edmund Muskie, are seen as more liberal, or left-of-center, than the average American.

Far outside the mainstream, Gov. George Wallace of Alabama is looked upon as a "radical" by an even 50 per cent of the public. There has been little perceptible shift in the way voters size up Wallace's base political set since 1968, when 52 per cent described his philosophy as "radical."

A recent Harris Survey among 1,604 households asked a cross section this question:

"How would you describe your own political philosophy — as conservative, middle-of-the-road, liberal, or radical?"

POLITICAL PHILOSOPHY OF PUBLIC

	1972	1968
Conservative	29	37
Middle-of-the-road	35	31
Liberal	19	17
Radical	4	2
Not sure	13	13

The most decisive divisions in political philosophy can be found when voters are assessed by the key dimensions of age and party affiliation. Younger persons tend to be far more liberal and radical, while their elders are much more conservative. By the same token, Republican party members are more conservative, while Democrats and Independents are more liberal.

POLITICAL PHILOSOPHY BY KEY GROUPS

	Conser- vative	Middle- of-the- Road	Lib- eral	Rad- ical
Nationwide	29	35	19	4
By Age
18-20	15	34	26	11
21-29	20	30	26	7
30-49	30	36	19	3
50 and over	38	37	11	2
By Party
Democratic	26	34	22	4
Republican	44	34	10	2
Independent	21	40	23	7

In every group, the middle-of-the-roads hold the balance of power between the liberals and radicals on one side and the conservatives on the other. Conservatism has clearly made relatively little inroad among voters under 30. Much the same can be said about liberals among those 50 years of age and over.

NIXON-HUMPHREY-WALLACE PREFERENCE BY POLITICAL PHILOSOPHY

	Conser- vative	Middle- of-the- Road	Lib- eral	Rad- ical
Voting for:
Nixon	62	52	27	27
Humphrey	25	36	59	40
Wallace	12	9	10	30
Not sure	1	3	4	3

For example, President Nixon sweeps the conservative vote against both Humphrey and Wallace. Significantly, Wallace does not attain any higher level among conservative than he does among the entire electorate — 12 per cent.

Sen. Humphrey, as the Democratic standard-bearer, wins the liberal vote by takes the radical vote, but his chief rival among this small, extreme group is more Gov. Wallace than President Nixon.

The balance of power clearly rests with middle-of-the-road voters, the largest group today at 35 per cent. Among this moderate group, the President wins the day handsily by a 52-36 per cent margin over Sen. Humphrey. Significantly, Wallace does poorest among this moderate segment of the electorate.

Talk that America has turned more conservative in recent years simply is not borne out by these results. By the same token, those who would claim an emerging liberal-radical majority have a long way to be before even approximating any dominance in American policies.

In 1972, at least, the battle will be over the middle-of-the-road group, where Richard Nixon now holds a substantial lead.

23 killed so far

Terrorists shake South America

BUENOS AIRES (UPI)—Political terrorists are shaking South America's neighboring River Plate republics of Argentina and Uruguay with gangland style assassinations, kidnappings, gun battles and bombings.

A total of 23 persons have been killed in the two countries so far this month by the terrorists and security forces reacting to the terrorism.

The immediate objective of the terrorists apparently is similar in both nations, according to security experts.

In Uruguay, a small nation with 2.9 million people on the river's northern bank, the objective is to weaken and eventually bring down the elected government that once was considered a model of social democracy.

In Argentina, a comparative giant on the southern bank with 24.3 million population, the objective is to block the military government's projected restoration of representative democracy in elections scheduled for next March.

Some political analysts see this southern "cone" of the continent, including Chile where a socialist government already is in power, as the current testing ground in the ideological tug-of-war that has divided the hemisphere since Fidel Castro's takeover in Cuba 13 years ago.

Castro himself, and Chinese Communist party chairman

Mao Tse-tung, are the inspiration for the terrorists who are dedicated and bold. They operate in small cells combining tactics of American prohibition era mobsters and modern guerrilla fighters.

In Uruguay, the terrorism is synonymous with Tupamaros, a far-left organization which has been a scourge in that tiny country for more than three years.

Although the Tupamaros failed in their bid to bring down the hard-line government of former President Jorge Pacheco Areco, their activities including the kidnap-murder of U.S. security adviser Daniel A. Mitrione in 1970—have made Uruguay a sort of "no man's land" for foreign diplomats, tourists and investors.

The Tupamaros slacked off for the presidential elections last November, in which a new leftist coalition, the "Broad Front," tested its strength. In effect, the Tupamaros declared a truce.

The Broad Front candidate, Liber Seregni, made a good showing, but he ran third and the hand-picked successor of outgoing President Jorge Pacheco Areco, Juan Bordaberry, was declared winner after a three-month recount of the votes.

The election truce was then ended, and terrorism resumed.

Writer details new 'polititalk'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Backstairs at the White House: William Safire, one of President Nixon's speechwriters, has revised his "non partisan" book "The New Language of Politics."

The Safire opus is a dictionary of catchwords, slogans and current political usage. Some are vintage phrases, cliches now a part of the language: "As Maine Goes, So Goes the Nation."

But others like "backlash", "Black power", "game plan", "peacenik" and the Nixonian "let me make one thing perfectly clear" are relatively new. The latter is lumped with so called "pointer phrases."

The major coinages of the Nixon years, he lists as: "Black capitalism," "bring us together," "back it," and "New Federalism" along with many alternative phrases coined by Vice President Spiro T. Agnew, including "mattering nabobs of negativism." His "effete snobs" and "radicallib" also gets special mention.

President Nixon's late May summit trip to Moscow reminded broadcaster Chet Huntley at a luncheon gathering for diplomats this week that foreign travel by presidents used to be frowned upon in the nation's early history.

President McKinley refused to set foot on the international bridge at El Paso to meet with the Mexican president.

President Theodore Roosevelt was the first president to travel outside the country while in office when he went to Panama.

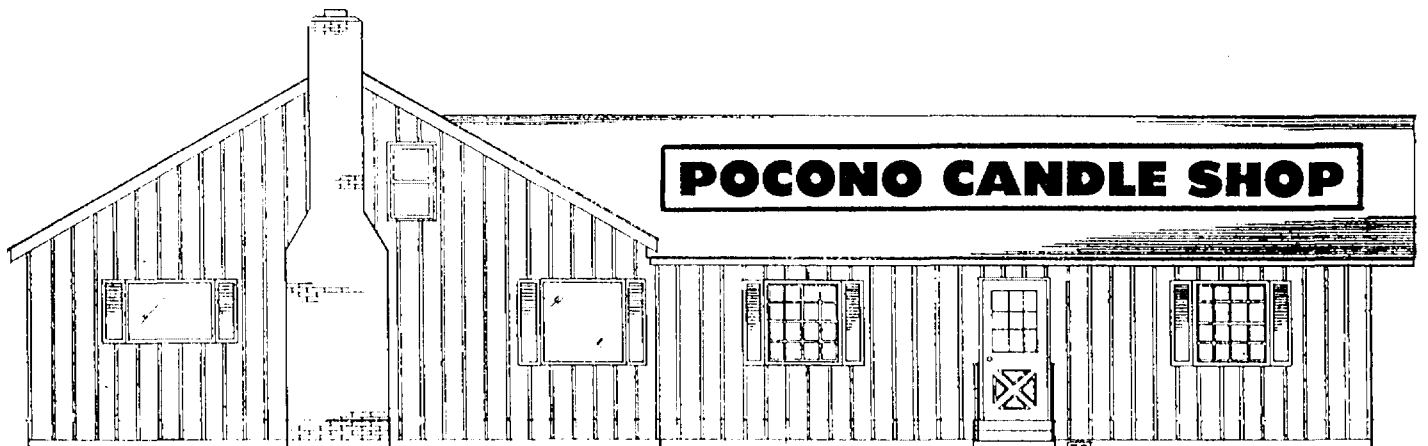

President Wilson caused an uproar among his lawmaker opponents when he decided to attend the Peace Conference at Versailles after World War I.

Presidents Harding and Coolidge both went abroad. But President Hoover was a stay-at-home. During the war years, President Roosevelt traveled to Casablanca, Teheran and Yalta for summit meetings with Allied leaders.

President Truman went to Potsdam. But it was President Eisenhower who topped them all with 16 trips abroad during his eight years in the White House. President Kennedy went to Europe and his successor, Lyndon B. Johnson was a globe trotter in pursuit of peace.

Nixon is expected to match Eisenhower's travel record this year.

The restoration of the Blue Room is taking longer than the renovation of the already completed Green and Red Rooms. The room will not be opened until early in May because a major plaster job has had to be done on the walls. Workmen found the Blue Room plaster cracking in several places because of poor work during the last renovation, according to curator Clement Conger.

LIFTING EXPERIENCE? WHEN YOU SHOPLIFT...

you leave yourself wide open for arrest. It's not a pleasant experience and you can be sure it's one you'll never forget — because it'll be right there on the records, for keeps. Seems foolish, doesn't it, to risk your reputation, your future, and hurt the people you love, for an unimportant item that you can live without. You can live without the consequences of shoplifting, too. Be smart . . . when "friends" try to tell you that it's cool to steal . . . ask them what's so cool about getting busted.

Your tax problems

"Your Tax Problems" is published as a public service and is prepared by the Philadelphia District Office of the Internal Revenue Service. Send queries to the District Director, Internal Revenue Service, 401 N. Broad Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, 19108. For personal replies give name and address.

Q. How long should I keep the records that support my income tax deductions?

A. Records that support an item of income or a deduction must be kept as long as they are material in administering any Federal tax statute. Usually, this is three years from the date the return was due or filed, or two years from the date the tax was paid, whichever occurs later. Some records, such as those dealing with stock and property transactions should be retained even longer.

Q. Are gambling losses deductible?

A. If you itemize, you may deduct your gambling losses incurred during the year, but only to the extent of your winnings. Gambling winnings must be reported as income.

Q. I recently filed my tax return. When will I get my refund?

A. If your return is complete and accurate, you should have your refund within 4-6 weeks from the day you filed.

Should your refund be delayed beyond this period, wait 10 weeks from the date of filing your return before contacting the IRS about it. This will allow time for the IRS to contact you about errors in your return such as those in arithmetic and missing Social Security numbers, W-2's or schedules.

Q. If I move before my refund comes, will it be forwarded to me?

A. Yes, if you have notified your postmaster of your new address.

Q. I gave my son a $2,000 down payment on a house as a wedding present. Does he have to pay tax on this gift?

A. No. Gifts are not taxed to the recipient. However, if a donor's gifts to any one person for the year exceed $3,000, he may have to file a quarterly gift tax return and pay a gift tax.

Q. As I drove to one of my Army Reserve meetings, I dropped my wife off at the dentist for a checkup. I know that I can deduct the Army Reserve travel as business expense, because the unit meets outside the general area of my tax home. Can I take a second deduction for the same trip because travel to and from a dentist is a medical expense?

A. No. The income tax law does not permit double deductions. You may only take one deduction or the other.

Q. Are annuity benefits taxable?

A. You may be able to exclude part or all of these benefits from income depending upon how much you previously contributed to the plan and how many months it will take you to recover this amount starting from the date of the first benefit payment. Generally, if you did not contribute to the cost of the annuity, the benefits are fully taxable. For more information, drop a postcard to your IRS district office and ask for a free copy of Publication 575, Tax Information on Pensions and Annuities.

Q. I just received a 1972 estimated tax return in the mail. Do I have to start filing estimated returns or can I just increase my withholding?

A. Some taxpayers find it convenient to increase their withholding tax to avoid filing declarations of estimated tax. If you do so, make sure the balance you estimate to be due on your 1972 Form 1040 will be less than $100.

Q. How can I tell whether I should take the standard deduction on my Federal return or itemize my deductions?

A. It usually will be to your advantage to itemize if: you are a homeowner paying interest and taxes; you had unusually large medical and dental expenses during the year; you paid alimony, suffered a major uninsured casualty loss, or made large contributions to qualified charities.

If you have any doubts as to which method will result in a lower tax, compute your tax both ways.

Q. Can I deduct the fees I pay my broker to purchase stock for me as an income-producing expense?

A. No. Fees you pay to a broker to acquire investment property, such as stocks or bonds, is not deductible, but is added to the cost of the property.

Fees you pay to a broker, bank or similar agent to collect bond interest or dividends on shares of stock are deductible as expenses of producing income.

Q. How does the dividend exclusion work?

A. The law provides that you do not have to pay tax on the first $100 in ordinary dividends. If the stock is owned jointly by husband and wife, then $200 in ordinary dividends may be received tax free on a joint return.

Be careful not to confuse interest from savings accounts, commonly called "dividends," which are taxable in full, with ordinary dividends, which are basically corporate distributions.

Q. Can employers now start hiring employees that will qualify them for the new work incentive tax credit that was added to the law by the Revenue Act of 1971?

A. Yes. Employers can hire persons that will qualify them for the new work incentive tax credit. The credit, equal to 20 per cent of cash wages or salaries paid to a qualified employee for his first 12 months of employment, may be claimed by those who employ workers under the Work Incentive (WIN) program. The aim of this program is to help people and their dependence on welfare by placing them in jobs or on-the-job training. The Labor Department must certify that these employees are placed under the WIN program.

'Pilgrims' not kissing-sweet

COSBY, Tenn. (UPI)—"The Southeastern Society for Elimination of Kissing-Sweet Breath" is getting ready for its annual pilgrimage to this little east Tennessee town where ramp is king for a day, the last Sunday in April.

Ramp eaters from all over will gather on Kineauvista Hill, April 30, to pay tribute to this wild leek, this distant cousin of the onion, this daughter of the lily family, this smirk in the face of the mouthwash industry.

Referred to affectionately by almost no one as "allium tricorculum blaceae"—its scientific handle—the ramp, or rampion, is viewed by oddsmen as a remarkable spring tonic, cleansing the blood, curing the all-overs and restoring a healthy glow to the puniest of men.

Be that as it may, the Cosby Ruritan Club is making big plans for the 19th annual ramp festival, having extended an invitation to Alabama Gov. George Wallace to take his chances with the juicy native of high mountain coves in east Tennessee and western North Carolina. Wallace did not commit himself firmly, however.

An entire new stage has been built for the country music, gospel singing and political stumping that are part of the ramp tradition.

A new ramp queen will be chosen from among east Tennessee beauties, and this year a prince and princess contest for the 6 to 8-year-old group is planned.

Next Tuesday, the women of the Cosby area plan to head into the mountains of western North Carolina, near Maggie Valley, to harvest 80 bushels of ramp from the high, moist, shaded hillsides and coves of the Smokies. The plant grows naturally at about 2500 feet.

They plan to dig for four days and spend the fifth day cleaning the ramp, which is served Sunday morning raw and cooked into a salad, with barbecued chicken, roast beef, cornpone and other mountain specialties.

Raw, the ramp is like a mild onion; cooked it is a sweet-tasting salad which saturates the taste buds that for a week afterwards the taste of ramp is a constant companion.

Your Horoscope

Frances Drake

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)

— Your zeal and ambition should bring fine gains and a large share of happiness, but do not overtax yourself. Meet new situations with equanimity.

April 21 to May 21 (Taurus) — Others are observing, some following your example. Your best foot forward! Cover all vital issues, but no exaggerating or cutting corners too close.

May 22 to June 21 (Gemini) — Separate fact from fiction precisely; waste no time beginning chores and, where useless "extras" would distract, delete them from your schedule. Keep day shipshape.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer) — Stellar influences now suggest that you get a tight hold on reins and direct carefully. Show a willingness to be taught a new trick or method.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo) — Handle routine with alacrity. Don't be distracted by nonessentials. Maneuver practically in decisive manner.

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo) — Step up endeavors to meet competition that is working overtime. The extra try will be worth it.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — If you let things slide — a tendency now — results will not be satisfactory. Read the signals and rules early and keep your activity at an even pace. Curb emotionalism.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — Stress your personality now and you can ride ahead with distinction. Take setbacks in stride, seeking still better ways to progress.

November 23 to December 21 (Sagittarius) — You can make a bright new place for yourself with a little more diligence. Use a practical arena for trying out ideas before putting them into effect.

December 22 to January 20 (Capricorn) — Influences favorable in part, but day will require more effort, steady application of your skills and knowledge. Cooperation with others vital.

January 21 to February 19 (Aquarius) — Fine planetary influences encourage artistic pursuits, romance, domestic interests. Day spells action, determination, aggressiveness. Plan wisely.

February 20 to March 20 (Pisces) — If you happen to get a late start, pick up your pace as you go along. Your fine mind and quick comprehension of all situations should be stimulated now.

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with a great love of the arts and the talents required to succeed in many of them. Your appreciation of color and symmetry may lead you to take up painting either as a career or an avocation which, in either case, would bring success and happiness. You couple a gift for organization with love of fellowman; may, therefore, take up "causes" and, whether along political, sociological or religious lines, could be an inspiring leader in the institutions promoting them. While a great lover of tradition and heritage, you also "keep up with the times" and, if engaged in business, are most progressive in your methods. As an historian or archeologist, you would be an outstanding success. Other fields suited to your talents: Education, botany, music, sculpture. Birthdate of: Queen Isabella of Spain; Henry Fielding, English novelist.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 8 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 8, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

SWIMMING POOL

ADVICE
by Brian Fenner, Sr.

The primary objective in the care of swimming pool water is to maintain sparkling clear water. We achieve this by using the correct amount of the right kind of chemicals.

If your pool is new or if the water has been in it for a few seasons, it is necessary to use a stabilizer chlorine. This supplies the pool with the initial chlorine requirements (amounts used vary according to make) NOTE: After this application — do not backwash for 24 hours.

The next step, of course, is to add chlorine. The correct amount should give you a reading on your test kit of a minimum 3.0 parts per million or lower.

For any advice concerning your pool, please call — without obligation — BCB Building Co. — Dealer for Buster Crabbe Pools — the best in the World — 992-6878 or 992-4914. (adv.)
